Top-sheet - Functional cognitive performance at childhood

Di Kuh, Marcus Richards, Karen Mackinnon | February 2014

Cognitive function was first tested at age 8 years in a school setting, and again in this setting at ages 11 and 15 years. A test of verbal comprehension given at the latter age was then re-administered at age 26 years (with 10 additional items of increased difficulty to avoid a ceiling effect), as part of the first interview of the survey member as an adult.

Categories of variables	Cognitive Function
Summary of work undertaken	Cognitive scores are standardised for whole population available on each test (-mean/sd) and standardised versions of the summary variables COG8, COG11, COG15 are derived [COG8H, COG11H, COG15H]. These three new summary variables are added to the original cognitive score variables in Cognition (file1). COG8, COG11, COG15 are dropped from files since standardised version should always be used. New standardised versions of WV26R and R26R are derived and added to the existing dataset.

History of cleaning/derivation/documentation

24/11/2003 - Derivation syntax for creating the variables cog8h, cog11h and cog15h

14/11/2008 - Derivation of childhood cognitive variables

13/04/2010 - File to pick up DK cog8h, cog11h and cog15h variables and create save file with these 3 variables

5/02/2014 - Create standardised versions of the tests at age 26. WV26H and R26H. Cleaning of 35 cases coded as 99 on GA15R. Can't find details but can see different N, Mean and SD from those recorded in original supporting documentation
